

Please indulge me in some shop talk.

My name is Marten Gabriel. 30 years in body work as well as designing and building treatment support systems has thought me a few things. As you look around for a suitable lift table for your patient care, let me share some ideas with you.

Let's understand the difference between "pressing" into tissue versus "leaning" into it. "Pressing" leads to your premature fatigue and perhaps even injury. You "lean" when the weight of your upper body is "resting" in your hands as they "dialog" with your patient. The philosopher Heidegger coined the phrase, "the allowing will". That's what you practice when you "lean". Depending on your height, style of work and repertoire of modalities that you employ, my tables may be the only ones with the lift range to empower you to work that way. I have pioneered the idea of extreme low lift tables for many years now and not one other manufacture of lift tables has made any effort to compete with me. I am convinced table makers are stuck back in the 60s someplace and have totally missed the revolution in treatment modalities that you now practice. My desire as therapist and designer is to provide better tools for people delivering manual health care. I want you to have access to this technology and I made sure on this new design that the base can be sold separately. Install your existing table top on it. If you can't afford the complete "Attitude" system get at least a lift under your present table. The right kind of lift is the best insurance for your career in bodywork, period. I'm sure you need no reminder of how much you spent learning your craft. If you get hurt you are out of a job. Granted, a lift table is no guarantee that you won't get hurt, but it is the best thing you can do to protect yourself. Now, consider how delighted your injured and elderly patients will be, when they find out how easy it is to get on or off your table. Besides; a little bit of competitive advantage has never hurt. You want to make people feel better, take their pains away. I want to help you do that, year in and year out. Please call me with your questions.

I only sell direct to therapist and not through dealers. I know how hard you work for your money. I want you to get the best price. If you buy multiple tables we can talk about a discount.

This brochure needs refinement, please accept my apology. We are still working out some details, but the first FS3 "Attitude" systems will be shipped beginning of May.
